

Through Vreba-Hoff Dairy Development's activities, many dairy farmers living in The Netherlands, Denmark, Canada, and other countries have decided to build a new future in the Midwestern region of the United States.

The new dairies are helping to meet the increasing demand for dairy products.

The United States recognizes that a competitive agricultural sector is an important part of the nation's economy and future.

In 1997, Vreba-Hoff Dairy, L.L.C. built its first 3,000 cow dairy operation. Finished in the fall of 1998, this state-of-the-art facility set a new trend within the American dairy industry.

Construction of a second facility, Vreba-Hoff Dairy II, began in 2000 and is now operational. These two facilities house approximately 8,000 cows and confirm Vreba-Hoff's commitment to exploring and incorporating modern dairy technologies within its projects.

Incorporating ideas learned within the Dutch and American dairy industries, Vreba-Hoff utilizes its expertise to develop modern dairies.

Current market forces are causing major changes within the dairy industries of Western Europe and the United States. Family farms have increased in size with the larger farms more prevalent than in the past. In part, this is due to the ability to produce milk more efficiently and more cost effectively while providing greater flexibility in the family's work schedule. Due to high expansion costs for milk quota and land within Europe, many agricultural families have found it necessary to relocate their operations to other locales where expansion is more affordable and an economic future more positive. As a result of these factors, Vreba-Hoff Dairy Development, LLC was established.

Vreba-Hoff Dairy Development, LLC draws from its experience within the Dutch and the American dairy industries to be of optimal service to European, Canadian, and other foreign farmers desiring to relocate their operations.

Vreba-Hoff can assist in making the development of a new dairy facility a reality.

Vreba-Hoff Dairy Development can provide assistance to develop a new dairy farm. Their services include:

- Providing information regarding relocation to the U.S.
- Sourcing of potential project sites
